Peters Prattling

Southern Expo 2019

I would like to ask that some club members be available on Friday evening from 7:00pm onwards to help setup, more importantly as many as possible attend the show and help populate the stand with models (they don't have to be to the club theme of "Not the country of origin") and just in case the message hasn't sunk in yet, all club members are eligible to put models on display, and then man the stand throughout the show, you are the best recruiting tool for the club I can think of. Help breaking down the tables on the Sunday evening will also be most appreciated.

Will someone please "volunteer" to be the display organiser?

Also, we've tentatively booked the hall for the 2020 show, March 28th & 29th.

Essex Modellers Show 2019

Announced just on the day of our last club meeting, the show has been booked in at the usual location of Hannakins Farm in Billericay for Sunday July 28th.

West Norfolk Show – Sunday June 16th

We've received an invite to the West Norfolk show in Downham Market, are we interested? We don't normally attend.

Hornchurch Country Park Military Show

they are having a Military Weekend on Saturday and Sunday 8th/9th June 2019, they would like us to come along and have a stall. Are we interested?

London Model Engineering Show 2019

Not shown on the accounts later in the AGM section, but we have received a cheque from the organisers for £65 as a thank you for attending. Certainly helps the club bank balance but let's not rely on this as most of the attendees have noticed the show traders were noticeably thinner on the ground this year, however there seemed to me to be plenty of people through the doors.

I Scrapped 2 Part Built Models This Month

I'm adding this report/story as a discussion point. I was part way through a build of a couple of 1/72nd A-Model Messerschmitt Me-109 Fs, they were started to go with the 2nd Southern Expo decal sheet ("Lean Into France") and some other markings I have picked up along the way. Previous F versions of the 109 have been old and/or mediocre, the most recent one was by Italeri and that suffers from poor fit and shape (I know because I have one).

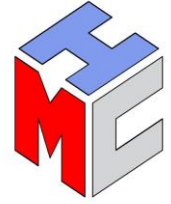

I'd bought the A-Model kits based partly on a review on the Hyperscale website and also from looking in the box. To be fair they looked quite detailed, as they had a mock engine around which you fastened the engine covers and reasonable cockpit.

However, the build was a different story. I persevered and got the kits to the point where the fuselages were together with the wings and tail planes attached. The engine covers were a different matter, they wouldn't fit very well, if at all. I managed to get them on but wasn't overly happy with the results. The kits went back in their box and got shoved to the bottom of the pile.

Some years later. I dragged the box out of the pile the other week, and re-examined the kits, the noses still looked off and even with some sanding and pulling apart with a view to repositioning, I came to the sad conclusion that they were irredeemable, so into the bin they had to go as there was no way I was going to have enough time or patience to whip them into any reasonable looking facsimile of the real thing.

So why this write-up? Well for me this is one of those moments where I've realised that I don't have to finish a model just because I've started it. There haven't been many kits, if any, which I've binned due to build issues. The only memorable one for me was an Airfix 1/72nd Fairey Firefly V, try as I might the outer wing panels would not stick to the inner section and I used so much glue the whole thing melted and that was well over 30 years ago.

It is just me or do any of you feel that you must finish the mode or is it saved from the bin only up to the point you stop enjoying the build?

I'm not proud that I binned the models but recognised that there was no other option.

Forthcoming Shows in 2019

Robin's Ruminations

Well tonight is the most thrilling club meeting we have all year, the A.G.M, yes I thought that that would get your blood pumping with excitement. Okay, let's get real, we have the A.G.M. to comply with the I.P.M.S. constitution, to which our club is affiliated, mainly of course to ensure table space at the Nationals at Telford. However, it is also the one chance every year that every member has the opportunity to alter the direction of the club, upcoming meetings or of course simply to vote out the lazy buggers that sit on the top table and drink tea and coffee while stuffing all the chocolate biscuits, hold on a second, I'm one of those lazy buggers! At least give it some thought.

However, let's get serious, well semi-serious for a few moments, think if you would like to see a different set-up or structure to the monthly meetings? Sounds silly but would you prefer sitting in a circle rather than two straight lines to chat easier? Do you want more modelling evenings, mini talks, plan a mini theme display for Telford or perhaps other shows we attend? What about next year's Southern Expo show, any thoughts? Here are a few random thoughts of my own.

The "it" factor Famous planes of the aces, test pilots and their planes, famous drivers and their cars, ships and their captains, figures of famous or infamous people.

Campaigns Pick a campaign, North Africa 1941/43, Vietnam, The Eastern Front, The drive across the Pacific, Korea, Arab / Israeli conflicts.

Family Connections Things members of your family did, was involved in or owned. Cars you or family owned or drove, the planes / ships they went on holiday on, places where family members served, what did they fly in, service, drive or sail?

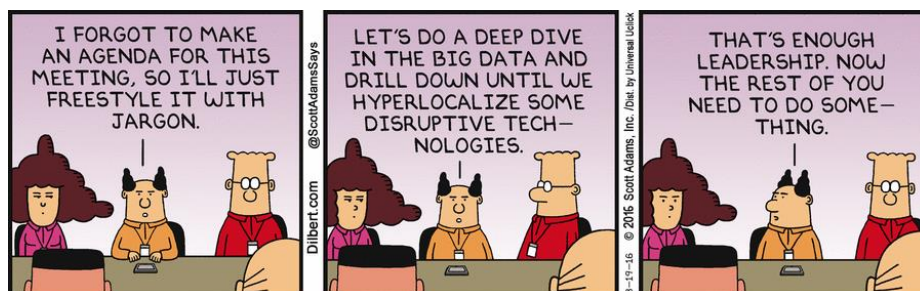

All of the above should be stretched to include as many different types of model as suits your modelling skills, tastes and availability.

My official hat is on.....

Okay good people, tonight is of course competition night, the last one of this modelling year and of course it's the Expo theme build. Good luck and I look forward to seeing tonight.
